The opposition papers have made a most startling discovery regarding the "extravagance" of the present Administration. They are parading before the public the important fact that the salaries of some of our government officers exceed the receipts of their offices. A list of these instances is made out by some Pope fearing waste, and published in glaring capitals, all over this blessed Union.

If Mr. Buchanan had established all the official posts, fixed the salaries of the same and filled them with his favorites, the uproar could not have been greater. In fact, such is the impression which these precious demagogues seek to convey. Else why all these crocodile tears over a state of affairs which has existed since this government had an existence, and with the establishing of which Mr. Buchanan had as little to do as the man in the moon.

Could anything be more contemptible than this extremely diminutive specimen of political petting? It has been reserved for the Know Nothing society to bring forward a great many ridiculous and childish sensation humbugs, but we think this remarkably astute and powerful political organization has excelled itself in giving to the world this last alarming mare's nest.

We suppose that if by any chance, or by a direct infliction of Divine Providence, the Know Nothing society should obtain control of our national affairs, all offices required for the successful working of the machinery of government which do not pay expenses, would be abolished. This confederacy would then become a joint stock company—a money making concern, and all offices that could not be made to pay, would be abrogated without reference to the honor, credit or safety of the Union. In that delightfully utopian period, when the "office would select the man and not the man the office," no office would start out on a search for an incumbent unless it could pay his salary and have a handsome little plum left over for the government. No office in its senses would attempt to catch a Know Nothing, unless it could pay that fastidious individual his salary without drawing upon the United States Treasury. In fact the repugnance to holding office, known to be entertained by the members of that uncommonly pure and patriotic body of men, makes it a matter of extreme doubt whether or not "sons of the sire" could be found willing to assume the cares and fees of offices necessary to the well being of our commerce and navigation.

If anything was needed to show the base hypocrisy and pitiful demagoguery of the few political saints who have such a horror of "expense" we submit that this last sickly, contemptible and absurd dodge must do the business most effectually. No one but an absolute idiot, or a shameless demagogue would think for a moment of charging upon the administration of Mr. Buchanan a state of affairs we have mentioned. No one with a particle of self respect or a particle of respect for the sense of his auditors, would get up and make a stump speech with this pitiful last and least Know Nothing trick for a text. Goodness knows we must be near the end of Know Nothingness now. If that faction is not "running emptions" now, we are no judge of small things. If this last given instance of "Democratic extravagance" is not the very tip of the tail of a small tail party, we will never prophesy again. If they get up anything any smaller or meaner they will surprise us, which would be hard for them to do unless they should turn a summer set and do a decent thing for once.

MUSICAL.—TAX & BALDWIN, publishers of and dealers in music, pianos and musical instruments, Cincinnati, O., have the most commodious and best appointed establishment in the United States. They have just laid in under obligations for a fine collection of pieces of their own publication, which, as specimens of musical engraving, approaches very near European excellence. And the wonder is that they are all beautiful, each with a charming individuality, a genuine little poetic flower of melody. But the songs themselves will reward any pains to learn them, and can never lose their interest. We can only name their titles, which are as follows:
"I've been gathering flowers, Mother;" "Oh! my love's gone, I shall see him no more;" "Leaves from George's Grave;" "Do you think of the days that are gone, Jennie?" "Scarlott's Pique;" "Mazurka;" "Day and night I thought of thee;" and "Bertha Waltz."

Fancy Ball at Blue Lick Springs.
We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Mr. HUTCHINSON to be found in another column. The present proprietor of the Blue Lick is spoken of in the highest terms by all who have visited him this summer. When we say to our Frankfort readers that SAM C. SAYRE officiates behind the desk they will require no further guarantee of good treatment and sumptuous fare. Those in search of pleasure cannot do better than to spend a week at the springs—including the Fancy Ball. BOB HARRIS will take you from Paris in his splendid passenger coaches in splendid style and in 240 time.

A New York letter to the Baltimore American says: "After nearly a month of unhealthy excitement the curtain at last falls in the DeRiviere and Blount drama. The weak-minded and deluded lady, whose eccentric conduct gave all the interest to the affair, returns in company with her daughter, to her home in Mobile; John Humke another of the unfortunate dramatic personae, is safely lodged in prison; Mulford, the lawyer, has absconded, and the principle personage of the romance De Riviere, has fled like a poor pitiful swindler as he is. The remarkable circumstance connected with him is that he should so readily have found such willing victims of his rascality. But let no rogue take heart by his success, and imagine that there is a plenty of Mrs. Blounts and lawyer Mulfords to work with. Though there is no lack of silly people, yet there are few who are so very silly as De Riviere's victims."

FATAL AFFAIR.—Last night, about 8 o'clock, difficulty occurred between DAN MCCURRY and WASH EVERTS. The former was shot in the abdomen and it is supposed, mortally wounded.

LOUISVILLE ELECTION.—Glorious News.—We have no full returns from Louisville, but a dispatch received says that the race is very close with a strong probability that some of the Democratic county candidates are elected. At any rate there is a falling off of the Plug Ugly votes in the city of from 600 to 1000. This is glory enough for one day.
We regret to learn that Capt. LOVELL ROUSSEAU and Dr. STANFORD were killed in a fight with each other.
The K. N.'s have elected their ticket in Fayette.

A BLOODY TRAGEDY.—THREE MEN BURNED.—On Monday last, at a barbeque in Madison Co., Kentucky, near Rockcastle, Mr. MOORE, the Constable, summoned Messrs. ROBERTS, MULLIN, JONES and brother to help him arrest two Hayses; they resisted, killing the constable and the brothers JONES, and wounding MULLIN who is not expected to live, and ROBERTS, who is slightly wounded in the hand. One of the JONES, after he had been out across the stomach, told them he could not live, but one of them held him by the head while the other cut his head nearly off, leaving but a small particle holding the head and body together. The weapons used were Bowie-knives. The murderers escaped, and the people around the county are after them. Mr. MOORE was a very clever man, and liked by all who knew him. One of the murders has since been arrested.

GOV. STEVENS AND THE NEW GOLD FIELDS.—Governor STEVENS, of the Washington Territory, has written a long letter to the Secretary of War, in which he complains bitterly of the exactions made by the B-tish authorities upon such American citizens as may seem disposed to penetrate the new gold regions. He says that the proclamations that have been made by the Hudson Bay Company are without any legal or binding authority, and should not be respected by the citizens and Government of the United States.

JAS. P. GAY'S TRIAL IN CLARKE.—The trial of Jas. P. Gay in the Clarke Circuit Court commenced on Tuesday last and on Saturday the jury brought in a verdict of guilty. Five lawyers appeared for the prosecution, and nine for the accused. A great crowd attended the trial and the hearing commenced when the verdict was rendered. Our readers will remember that about a year since Mrs. Jay published a romance in the Ohio Farmer in which the real characters were Jas. P. Gay and wife. Shortly after a difficulty occurred between Gay and Jay. Price and son, in which the son was killed and the father badly wounded.—Paris (Ky.) Play.

The Hartford Free Press gives the following synopsis of a case which occurred at Bristol, Connecticut:
A man, calling himself Smith, went to bed and when his bed room door left open. His wife thought the weather cool enough to shut it. She went to bed an hour after, but before the dispute was settled he pinched her. They both went to sleep, and the next day she went home to her father. She complained to the grand jury, and Smith was fined $6 and costs. Smith appealed to the Superior Court. His defense was that she threw her leg this way and hit a bolt from which he was suffering, and that he merely struck out in self defense. Two lawyers on each side were engaged.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.—SUSPECTED MURDER.—On the morning of the 17th instant, the clothes of C. B. Hall, of Louisville Ky., were found on the bank of the river at Jefferson City. Hill George, Nicholas, of that place, brother of Geo. N. S. pliers of this city. He graduated with honor at West Point, and was chief engineer under Gen. Worth, for whom he planned the attack of the Texas Rangers upon the Bishop's palace at Monterey. He also distinguished himself at the siege of Vera Cruz. He was engaged at the time his death in constructing a bridge over the Delaware, intended to command the entrance to the Delaware river. He leaves a wife and seven children.—N. Y. Times.

The End of a Woman's Capricious.
A LOVE STORY.
"Men are never so awkward, never so ungraceful, never so disagreeable, as when they are making love. A friend is a luxury, a husband a duty, I suppose; but that intermittent class of human beings denominated 'lovers' are terrible bores. It does not seem to them that women to blush and look flustered now and then, makes it desirable to be a man; but to see a man with his face as red as a ripe cherry, and a real parcel of strong mindedness, self-reliance and masculine dignity, done up in broadcloth and starched linen, quaking from the toe of his boot to the top of his shirt collar, his mouth awry, and his tongue twisted into convulsions in the vain attempt to say something sweet—O gracious!"

So said a young Sophie Lyon, seated to herself, as she sat swinging backwards and forwards before the window, half buried in the cushions of a luxuriant arm-chair, and playing with a delicate ivory fan which lay upon her lap.
"It all seems so strange, not to say dreary," she continued, with a running, musical laugh, "after she has waited and sung, and poured out all of nonsense, with my body tilted up, and my heart, one's self or one's companion, to hear him come down plump on the subject of matrimony, as though that was the legitimate result of every such insipid acquaintance? For my part I never had a lover (here Sophie fluttered her fan and looked pleased, for she had more than one) that was sick of her presence. There was Capt. Morris—I thought him the handsomest man in the whole circle of my acquaintance, until he went on his knees to me and swore he should die if I didn't take pity on him. Somehow he always looked like a fright to me afterwards. Then there was Dr. Wilkins—he was really agreeable, and people said very learned. I was delighted with him for a time; but his talk was all of the 'poor fellow blushed, puffed and perished!' and how the poor fellow blushed, puffed and perished! He called me an 'adorable creature,' and hiccupped in the middle of 'adorable.' Horrors! I have hated him ever since. Then there was—"

Here Sophie started. She heard the door bell ring. With a nervous spring she stood before her mirror, smoothing down her brown hair with a taste truly comely.
"It would do me no harm," she said, as she took a finishing survey of her person in the glass and shook out, with her plumed, jeweled fingers, the folds of her airy muslin dress.
The moment afterwards, when a servant entered to announce Mr. Harry Ansley, she was back to her old seat by the window, rocking and playing with her fan, apparently unconscious of the bright smile which had just lit up her face, and the quick thrill to her heart, or the betraying crimson all over her pretty face. "Tell him I will be down presently," she said.

The girl disappeared and Sophie flung open the window, that the cool fresh air might fan away the extra blush from her complexion. Then she went again to the mirror, and after composing her hair, she looked at her expression of countenance, descended to the parlor. A smile broke over her features, and she reached out both hands to the guest, but as if suddenly recollecting herself, she drew them back again, and with a formal bow of recognition she passed him and seated herself in a further corner of the room.
It was very evident that something was wrong with Sophie, and that she had not been either not to be pleased, or not to please. Could it be that she had forgotten what was coming?—that a presentation of that visit and its result had dictated the merry speeches in her chamber? Be that as it may, a half hour had not elapsed before Harry Ansley had found a fortune, (which latter by-the-way, was nothing wonderful), in the same place where Capt. Morris and Dr. Wilkins had been before them.

"The first man that I ever heard say such things without making a fool of himself," muttered Sophie emphatically from behind her fan, as she sat blushing and evidently gratified, yet without deigning any reply to the gallant straight-forward speech in which her lover had risked his all of hope.
"He ought to do penance for the pretty way he means his tongue. He's altogether too calm to suit me," and Sophie shook her curls head merrily, holding her fan before her for a screen.
"Did she forget what she had been saying?" wondered if I could share the way old Uncle James used to do in church!" she soliloquized.
"It is but a word, and nothing to be afraid of," if he thought I had been asleep while he was talking!" Sophie's blue eyes danced with suppressed merriment as she gave two or three heavy breathings, and followed them up with a nasal explosion worthy of an orthodox deacon. It was well done—and theatrically done—and poor Harry sprang bolt upright—surprised, mortified, elated. Humankind could stand it no longer, and Sophie gave vent to her mirth in a burst of triumphant laughter.

"You little witch—you mischief—you spirit of evil!" exclaimed the relieved Harry, as he sprang to her side and caught her by the arm with a grip that made her scream. "You deserve a shaking for your behavior!" Then lowering his voice, he added gravely:
"If you never have done tormenting me! If you love me, you can't be so generous enough to tell me so? and if you don't, and I not at least worthy of a candid rebuke?"
Words sprang to Sophie's lips that would have done credit to her womanly nature, and made her lover's heart bound with rapture, for the whole depths of her being were stirred and drawn towards him as they never had been towards any man before. But she could not utter a word, for the gallery then she would go, one step further from him ere she laid her hand in his and told him he was dearer than all the world besides. So she checked the tender response that trembled on her tongue and flinging off her grasp, with a mocking gesture and a ringing laugh, she danced across the room to the piano.

She seated herself, she ran her fingers gracefully over the keys, and broke out in a wild, brilliant, defiant song, that made her listener's ears tingle as he stood watching her, and choking back the indignant words that came crowding to his lips for utterance.
"Sophie, listen to me!" he said at length, as he paused from her exhortation. "Is it generous? Is it just, to trifle with me so? to turn into ridicule the emotion of a heart that offers to you the most reverent affection?"
"I have loved you, because beneath this volatile surface character of yours, I thought I saw truthfulness and simplicity, purity of soul, and a warm current of tender, womanly feelings, that would be with blessings the whole life of him whose hand was so fortunate as to touch its secret springs. You are an heiress, and only a poor student, but if that is the reason why you treat me so scornfully, you are less the noble woman than I thought you."

Sophie's head was averted, and a suspicious moisture glistened in her eyes as Harry ceased speaking. Ah! why is it that we sometimes lose our highest happiness so lightly—carrying it carelessly in our hands as though it were but dust, and when we turn our backs to it, it is gone forever? When she turned her countenance towards him again, the same mocking light was in her eyes, the same coquettish smile breathed from her red lips.
"Speaking of heiresses," said Sophie, "there's Helen Myrtle, whose father is worth twice as much as mine. Perhaps you had better transfer your attention to her. Mr. Ansley. The difference in our dowries would no doubt be quite an inducement to her, and she might consider your case more seriously than I have done."

Like an insulted prince, Harry Ansley stood up before her—the hot, fiery, indignant blood dashed in a fierce torrent over his face—his arms crossed tightly upon his breast, as if to keep his heart from bursting with uprising indignation. His compressed lips, and his dark eyes flashing, Sophie, cruel Sophie! You will let me drop too much of your cruel sarcasm. You trespass upon my forbearance one little step further than you would have dared, had you known his proud and sensitive nature.
Not till he had gone—gone without a single word of expostulation, leaving only a grave "good by," and the memory of his pale face to plead for him. He had done it, and he had done it, a realization of what she had done. Then a quick terrible shot through her heart, and she would have given every curl on her brown head to have had him beside her one short moment longer.

"Fah! what am I afraid of?" He will be back again within twenty-four hours, and as unimportant as ever," she muttered to herself as the street door closed after him; and yet she sat there, a sob, followed the words, and could Harry have seen the beautiful pair of eyes that watched him so eagerly as he went the long street, or the bright face that leaned away out through the parted blinds, with such a wistful look, as he disappeared, it might have been his true triumph.
In spite of Sophie's prophecy, twenty-four hours did not bring back Harry. Days matured into weeks, and still he did not come, nor in all that time did she see him. And now she began to think herself quite a martyr, and acted accordingly. In fact, she did as almost any heroic would have done under the circumstances—gave pale and just. Maria began to suggest the delicacy to tempt Sophie's palate. "The poor dear child was getting so thin." In vain Sophie protested that she had no appetite.

In vain papa brought delicate gifts and piled up costly dresses before his pet. A faint smile, or abstracted, "thank you," was the only recompense. As sister Kate suggested that Harry's absence was an argument connected with his altered demeanor, Sophie would toss her ringleted head with an air of supreme indifference, and go away and cry over it, hours at a time. Every body thought something was the matter with Sophie. Sophie, however, remained the same.
Her suspense and penitence became insupportable at last. Sister Kate, who had come so near the solution of the true mystery, should know all—so said Sophie. Perhaps she could advise her what to do, for to give Harry up forever seemed every day more and more of an impossibility.
"Will you come into the garden with me Kate?" she asked, in a trembling voice of her sister one day, about a month after her trouble with Harry. "I have something of importance to tell you." "Go away, darling, and don't let me see you in a few moments," replied Kate, casting a searching glance at Sophie's flushed cheeks and swollen eyes.

Running swiftly along the garden paths, as if from fear of pursuit, Sophie turned aside into her favorite arbor, and flinging herself down on a low seat, buried her head among the cool vines, and gave herself up to a paroxysm of passionate grief. Soon she heard steps approaching, and an arm was laid tenderly about her waist, and a warm hand was laid caressingly on her drooping head.
"O Kate, Kate!" she cried in the agony of her repentance, "I am perfectly wretched. You don't know why, though you have come very near guessing two or three times. Harry and I—"
Here a convulsive sob interrupted her, and the hand upon her head passed over her disordered curls with a gentle soothing motion.
"Harry and I?"—another sob—quarrelled two or three weeks ago. I was willful and rude, just as it was natural for me to be, and he got angry. I don't think he is going to forgive me, for he hasn't been here since."

Sophie felt herself drawn in a closer embrace, and was sure Kate pitied her.
"I would not have owned it to anybody if it had been just as it is," she continued, rubbing her little white hands, "but I think I love him almost as I do you and father and mother."
A kiss dropped on Sophie's glossy head, and tighter was she held. She wondered that Kate was so silent, but still kept her face hidden in the vines.
"He asked me to be his wife," she continued, "asked me as nobody else ever did—in such a manly way, that he made me feel as though I ought to have been the one to plead instead of him. I could not bear that, and I answered him as I should not. He thought it was because he was poor and I was rich; and all the time I was thinking I would rather live in a cottage with him than in the grandest palace in the world with any other man, only I was too proud to tell him so to his face."
"Well, my dear, Kate, you are much better than I am, and you never get into trouble. I am sure I shall die if you don't!" And poor Sophie wept again.

"Look up, dear, and I'll tell you."
Sophie did look up, with a start, and the next moment, with a little scream, leaped into the arms—out of sister Kate, but Harry! a voice! Sophie declares to this day that she has never forgotten either of them, though she has been Mrs. Ansley two years.

The Army to be Permanently Located in Utah.
CAMP OF THE ARMY OF UTAH, WEST CREEK, NEAR SALT LAKE, Saturday, July 3 1858.
The army will not move from here for several days. The Anniversary of American Independence will be celebrated by the firing of a national salute, and by other appropriate ceremonies.
General Johnston has returned from his visit to various valleys, with a view of selecting a location for winter quarters. He considers the country over which he has passed to be essentially a desert. He has seen no point which he considers well adapted to the use of a permanent post.
The army will move within two or three days, however, to Cedar Valley, about forty miles from Salt Lake City, ten or twelve from Lehi, and fifteen from Big Water, where barracks and store houses will be immediately erected. The location is a favorable one from which to command the chief settlements with promptness and efficiency.
Grass is very scarce, however, for large herds, and it has been decided to send back to Fort Leavenworth all the animals not absolutely necessary to be retained in camp.

FATAL CAUSALTY.—On Wednesday evening last a young man named Jacob Sellers was killed by the cars, in this place. It is supposed that he got on the extra train for Lexington, under the impression that he was carrying towards Covington, when discovering his mistake, he attempted to jump off; but, unfortunately, he fell upon the track, and was mangled in the most horrible manner. He was literally dismembered, and intestines were strewn in all directions.—Cynthiana Age.

THE CONSULATE OF PERAMBUCO.—Our friend Col. W. W. Stapp, left yesterday for his new home as Consul at Pernambuco, in Brazil. He takes with him the well wishes of many friends. He will make an excellent Consul, and the Brazilians, as well as other nations, will be pleased with the manner in which he will represent America at that point. Our government will not send abroad a better Democrat or more faithful servant. We wish him a pleasant, a safe and speedy journey from North to South America.—Louis Courier.

STEAMBOAT MEDICINE CHESTS.—No steamboat medicine chest can be complete without a liberal supply of BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT. Among the names of distinguished men who have attested the value of this preparation on shipboard, that of the late Dr. Kane, the hero of the Polar seas, is conspicuous. The great explorer pronounced it the best liniment for external application, and suggested its introduction into the medicine chests of all sea-going vessels. Scarce any casualty could happen on shipboard, but that the Arctic Liniment would be a useful remedy, and in most cases an indispensable one.

Appetite and Strength Restored.
WILLIAM YOUNG, of South Pittsburgh, says: "After having suffered severely for several days with a most distressing attack of Diarrhoea, I purchased a bottle of BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT. It gradually checked the disease, and restored my bowels to perfect order. Before I had finished the bottle, I found my appetite and strength returning. I believe it worthy of the character you give it, and shall recommend it to all." For particulars, address, FOWLER & WELLS, 305 Broadway, New York.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A German named Jacob Seiler was killed near the Depot yesterday falling off the train as it was backing down. Coroner Rankin held an inquest upon the body, and the jury returned a verdict accordingly.—Cynthiana News.

INFALLIBLE REMEDY FOR SCURVY.—During two awful winters in the region of eternal ice, the efficacy of BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT, as a cure for scurvy, was fairly put to the proof; and when it was tested it, no one will doubt that the order was a searching one. The liniment was invented expressly for Dr. Kane's expedition, and Dr. Bragg had the pleasure of learning from the distinguished voyager's own lips, that he was more than satisfied with the effects of the remedy, and considered it also invaluable as an antidote to all scorbutic, ulcerous and cutaneous diseases. It is for sale at all respectable drug stores.

WILLIAMS, for the cure of DYSPEPSIA, and nothing but DYSPEPSIA, (as advertised in another column) has, by its own merits, obtained for itself so high a reputation in Philadelphia, that Physicians acquainted with its properties, are using it themselves and prescribing it to their patients, convinced, by observation, of its great efficacy in restoring the disordered digestive organs to healthy function. Numerous cases of Dyspepsia of the most aggravated character which were abandoned as incurable by some of the Medical Faculty, have, by the use of this Elixir, been restored to perfect health, as attested certificates testify.

The Naturalization Laws.
For the information of our readers, and also for officers of the coming August elections, we publish below the opinion of the Court of Appeals, delivered by Judge Simpson at the last session of the Court, in a case brought by appeal from the Fayette Circuit Court. It will be seen that the court fully sustains the position taken by the entire Democratic press and a number of eminent legal gentlemen of the State, and is adverse to the opinion of the Attorney General, by which thousands of foreigners were refused the privilege of voting at the last election. The entire opinion is too long for our columns, but the abstract which we publish, furnishes all that is material in the case.

NATURALIZATION LAWS.
ABSTRACT OF THE OPINION OF THE COURT OF APPEALS IN THE CASE OF MONROE v. DUBOIS, APPEALS FROM THE FAYETTE CIRCUIT COURT.

FROM THE FORTHCOMING VOLUME OF B. MONROE'S REPORTS.

1. No judicial officer, however low his grade as such, is liable to suit for a judicial opinion, however erroneous it may be, if it is not influenced by improper motives. (4 Bibb, 28.)
2. No action can be maintained against the "judges of elections, whose functions are to some extent judicial, for refusing to receive a vote, without allegation and proof that they were influenced by bad motives, and decided contrary to their honest convictions as to what was right and proper."
3. A sheriff, whose duty it is to decide on the qualification of voters when the two judges disagree in regard to the qualification of voters, acts judicially.
4. The allegation in a petition against a sheriff who refused to permit the plaintiff to vote when he had a right to vote, "that the deponent knowingly and wilfully, with an unlawful intention, refused to receive the plaintiff's vote," shows a good cause for action.
5. The act of naturalization, as it is required to be performed by the act of Congress, is a judicial act. (Spratt v. Spratt 4 Peters, 433.) and Congress cannot authoritatively confer jurisdiction on State courts, or compel its exercise. (Huston v. Monroe, 5 Wheaton, 27.) which was a criminal case. (Harney v. Sharp, 1 Dana, 412.)
6. The authorities on the subject of jurisdiction, conferred on State courts by Congress, seem to be "that in judicial matters, the concurrent jurisdiction of the State courts depends upon the pleasure of Congress in every case in which the subject matter can constitutionally be made cognizable in the Federal courts, and that the State courts will, in civil cases, unless prohibited, retain a concurrent jurisdiction in all cases where they had jurisdiction over the subject matter." (1 Vol. Kent's Com. 54 page 410.)
7. A State court cannot compel State courts to exercise jurisdiction which may confer, and for the performance of which they have an adequate inherent jurisdiction, yet if the State courts exercise the power, it is a valid act.
8. Every Court of Record, whether of a State or of the United States, having common law jurisdiction, is fully competent to perform every act which is necessary to be done in the process of naturalization, as State courts may authorize the officers of other State to do certain acts, as taking depositions, etc., which, when done in conformity with the act conferred, is valid.
9. The fact that State courts have for a long period of time exercised the power of naturalization, is a strong argument in favor of its exercise, especially as it has been repeatedly recognized. (Campbell v. Gordon and wife, 6 Grant 176; Stark v. Chesapeake Gas Co., 7 Crane 470.) in which cases naturalization was adjudged to be citizens. (5 Leigh 71; 1 Hall 141; 18 Barbou 441; 5 English's Ark. Rep. 62.)
10. Such State courts as are designated by the act of Congress, have the power to naturalize foreigners under that act of Congress, and are so recognized in our Revised Statutes, page 172.
11. The Lexington city court being a court of record, having a clerk and seal, and being vested with a limited common law jurisdiction, has authority to admit aliens to citizenship.
12. Foreigners who have resided in the State, county, and precinct the length of time required by the Constitution, are entitled to vote immediately upon being naturalized.

The case of Campbell v. Bullock decides the same principle.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BENJAMIN, MASS., 20th Dec. 1855.
Dr. J. C. Ayer: I do not hesitate to say that I have used your Cherry Pectoral for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and all the concomitant symptoms of a Cold, in your Chamberlain's. The constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of these complaints. E. B. MORTLEY, M.D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of New York, writes: "I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my family ever since I have known it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a cold I should sooner give your Cherry Pectoral than any other medicine. It is a most valuable remedy for the cure of whooping cough, croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to those who are afflicted with these complaints. E. B. MORTLEY, M.D.
